RICHARD HUDSON IN GEORGIA CAMPAIGN

"Oh Ye Hoke and Joe" by Richard Hudson.
It is in Georgia during its great political campaign, and could hear the roaring of the tigers, for politicians are just like tigers, when they alight they get mighty thick; the following words chase through my mind like a streak of lightning:

HOKE.
It was the name of Hoke. As some thought it would be a mighty joke.

But now they have come to see As to what he is going to be: And he had on a very fine trace, Which snowed little Joe under in the race.

JOE.
It was the name of Joe Brown. In Georgia's cities and towns. Said they "He's a fine little bean, And we will vote for our little Joe." But now they are walking around the towns, Their faces covered with frowns.
